“SLS-Free, ALS-Free” ??? Sorry, what is this language?

You may have already read on our body hygiene and hair products this statement «without sulphate surfactant» or «without SLS or ALS». Do these expressions sound a little obscure to you? Don't panic, we can explain everything.

Behind these two acronyms SLS (Sodium Lauryl- or Laureth-Sulphate) and ALS (Ammonium Lauryl Sulphate) hide simply two of the foaming components most regularly used in the cosmetic industry. These two components contribute to the formation, density and abundance of foam. These compounds are called «surfactants» and their presence in the product formulation is necessary to obtain foam.

Here is the issue: ALS and SLS are potentially allergenic surfactants and can be irritating. As they are omnipresent in everyday foaming products, we have all been in contact with them throughout our lives and as everyone knows, the more you are in contact with an allergenic substance, the more you increase the risk of triggering an allergic reaction to it. You should not worry: it is not absolutely necessary to use ALS or SLS to obtain foam, because there are many other surfactants. Propolia®'s foaming products are as gentle as possible, as we use a combination of several natural surfactants in small quantities which limits the risk for allergic reaction and ensures a good quality foam. Yes, even in organic products this is possible!
